Quinton was raised on the fringes of the Namib Desert and has spent most of his life living close to nature in the African bush. He has a passion for the natural sciences and is today, considered one of Southern Africa's leading bush-craft specialists.

His love for wild places and adventure has taken him from the bitter cold of sub-Antarctica to the scorching deserts of the Middle-East. He has summited the highest ice-peak in Russia and has lived with 'vanishing' tribes in Africa, the frozen wastelands of Outer Mongolia and the sweltering jungles of the Amazon basin.

As a conservationist, he has managed the Animal Collection for one of the largest Zoological Gardens in Africa where he was committed to the breeding of endangered species around the world.

A frequent resource in print and on radio programs, speaking on a variety of nature topics, he is well known as a television presenter of popular wildlife programs such as "Aardwolf" and 50/50 "Veldfocus".

He is a businessman and trained as a classical pianist.

QUINTON'S TOPIC

Thriving in Tough Times - Back to Basics

The complete "Back to Basics" manual for survival in the corporate world - timeless principles for business and personal success, regardless of organisation or purpose

Quinton uses spectacular visuals to take his audience on a fascinating journey into the African bush. He demonstrates how a San Bushman Tribe (The Company/Group) is able to thrive in the harsh, ever-changing Kalahari (The Marketplace/Workplace) due to a thorough understanding of the resources on which they depend (The Income Source/Customer) and the predators with which they compete (The Competition). The message is powerful and riveting, drawing perfect parallels between the challenges of survival in the bush and success in the business world.

Quinton focuses on the timeless 'Universal Laws of Success' – the imperative actions, deeds and behaviours that underpin success in any endeavour, by any person or any team. These laws are not complex – indeed they are simple and efficient...and they've been practiced for thousands of years. We call them...The BASICS.

But what exactly are these basics? Where do they come from? How and why do they make a difference...?

In a compelling manner, Quinton provides answers. He hammers home the importance of anyone and everyone recognising the huge value that the basics will offer when habitually applied in their quest towards greater success. Every person has dormant or under-utilized business skills. These skills need only to be set free or "unlocked" to realize enhanced performance, both personally and for the company, group or team.

Unforgettable analogies vividly emphasise and reinforce the necessity to get "Back to Basics", not only in business, but also within our complex, personal lives.

"Fantastic! An amazing concept. The delegates were enthralled."
